

Answer key

There are lots of ideas you can use for such a lesson. You can also add your own questions about TikTok adjusting it to your students. That's what I often do, since every student has a different experience and knowledge about this topic.

You can take different TikTok videos, show them to your students as examples and discuss them. I'm sure that some adults might be surprised when they see it :)

There're plenty of articles which you can also use as an additional reading task or as students' homework.

TASK 2.

1. That there's a big problem with predatory behaviour on TikTok.
2. She started getting messages saying that she was beautiful and sexually explicit messages from adult men (which means that we're literally allowing strangers into our children's lives)
